Note (from Tom Chandler):

The % of red hair in the US is elevated, with estimates ranging from approximately 2% to 6%. Although this is notably below the % in Scotland and Ireland (and possibly England, depending upon the source of the estimate), because the US is also the third largest country in the world in terms of population -- behind China and India, two overwhelmingly dark-haired countries -- the US actually houses a greater total number of redheads than any other country on earth. ---
